“Our love, a fragile flame once bright,

Now flickers and fades into the night.

The embers still smolder, a bittersweet pain,

A reminder of what we could have gained.”

Yet, amidst the darkness of loss, Gani's poetry shimmers with a glimmer of hope. In "The Phoenix Rising," he finds solace in the transformative power of adversity, comparing his own journey to that of the mythical phoenix:

“From ashes, I rise with wings unfurled,

The flames of pain have tempered my soul,

A stronger, wiser being made whole.”

A masterpiece of passion, old and new.”
