Hylton's international career was cut short by the outbreak of the First World War. He enlisted in the army and was sent to France, where he served with distinction. In 1916, he was killed in action during the Battle of the Somme.

Hylton's death was a huge loss to the cricketing world. He was 22 years old and had already achieved so much. But his legacy extends far beyond his cricketing achievements. Hylton's story is a reminder of the sacrifices made by so many during the war.

In 1919, the Middlesex Cricket Club unveiled a memorial to Hylton at Lord's Cricket Ground. The memorial is a simple stone cross with a plaque that reads: "In memory of Leslie Hylton, who gave his life for his country and his name to legend."

Hylton's memory is also honored at the Imperial War Museum in London. The museum has a display that tells the story of Hylton's life and his sacrifice.

Leslie Hylton was a true hero. He gave his life for his country and his name to legend. His story is one that should be remembered and celebrated.
